Romance of Ellis Island

(Original.)

Why should story tellers rack their brains for themes when romances are happening every day under their noses? Here, like a flower peeping from under a heap of rubbish, is a romance extracted from the most unromantic thing in the world an emigrant ship. It only remains for the story teller to put it in form. It is not a tale of young lovers. In the conventional story romance ends with marriage. Nature knows no such division. Conceivably an old fruit tree bearing shortly before it is cut down a single bit of fruit into which the tree's vitality has been concentrated and you have the kind of romance you are about to get.

Forty years ago Herman Gurlich, a Prussian, came to America, purchased a farm, married, raised a family and prospered. His wife died, and one by one his children left him to marry and raise children of their own. For ten years he worked his farm alone, and then it occurred to him to relieve his solitude by revisiting his former home in Prussia. He did so, but failed to find the diversion he had expected. The place he had left as a village had grown to be a city, and the friends of his youth who had not gone elsewhere were in the churchyard. Disappointed, he turned his face again toward his desolate home in America.

Martha Leoser, a widow living in Berlin with her daughters, had a son in America. Her daughters had been with her since their birth, but her one son had left her when he was a boy, and she pined to spend the few years that remained to her where she might occasionally see him. At last she could resist the temptation to go to America no longer.

Now it happened. This is a short sentence, an incomplete sentence, yet how much there is in it! What would all the story tellers do if the two worlds were blotted out from the world's ongoing? It happened that Heinrich Gurlich and Martha Leoser were passengers on the same ship. One day they sat side by side and fell to talking. Gurlich rejoiced with the mother in her expectations at meeting her boy, and Mrs. Leoser grieved with the old man when he spoke of his return to his lonely farm. They met frequently on the voyage and on reaching port parted with mutual regret.

In New York harbor, where they landed, is Ellis Island, a danger point for emigrants more to be dreaded than a submerged rock of the ocean. Here they must satisfy the officials that they will not be a burden upon the United States. Gurlich had no trouble in doing so and took his departure. Mrs. Leoser sent for her son, who lived in one of the environs of New York. He came, and for a brief period the mother and her boy enjoyed their meeting and the prospect of at least living on the same continent. But the young man failed to satisfy the authorities that he could support his mother. He had a large family of his own and was at the time out of employment. His mother, too old to support herself, had no one else on whom to depend. The decree went forth that Martha Leoser must be deported to her native land.

Herman Gurlich, in the turmoil of the metropolis, was alone—as much or more alone than he would be when he returned to his farm. In years he had met but one person of his own generation to give him one spark of sympathy—the woman he had met on the steamer. She had shown him a paper bearing her son's address to ask how she might find him. This address Gurlich remembered.

One evening there was a rap at the door of young Leoser, and upon its being opened there stood Gurlich.

"Is Martha here?" he asked. He remembered only the widow's first name.

"No, and she will not be here. She is to be deported."

Gurlich went into the house, and his host told him that there was no hope of his mother remaining, since there was no one to support her.

"Yes, there is one," said the old man after a long pause.

"Who?"

"I. If your mother will marry me and go to live with me on my farm she need not go back to Germany."

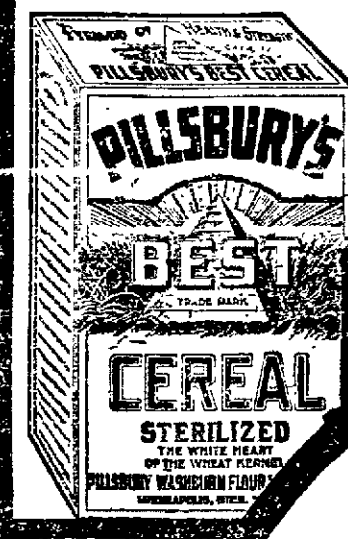

In half an hour the two men were on a boat speeding for Ellis Island. They found the poor woman bemoaning her fate. Her eyes lighted as she saw her companion of the voyage.

And here the effort of the story teller to put this humble romance in story form breaks down. Never was offer of marriage made in a form more widely diverse from the conventional proposal laid down in printed romances. The son took his mother aside and told her of Gurlich's proposition. While mother and son conferred the would be groom stood making pretense of looking at a family of Russian Jews eating sauerkraut. In a few minutes Leoser returned and said his mother accepted the offer. In vain the romance constructor casts about for some stretch of facts to give story form to the reception by the lover of the news that he was to be made happy. Yet why try express what no words ever have succeeded in expressing? Perhaps he said "Yah," perhaps "Das is goot," but no matter what he said or how unlike our conceptions of what he should have said, his old heart experienced an echo of the gladness of youth.

Upon Gurlich's promising the authorities that he would be responsible for Martha Leoser's support they at once gave her permission to go where she liked. With her affianced husband and her son she went to the latter's house, where the marriage ceremony was performed, and after a brief visit the bride and groom started for Gurlich's farm.

NIP IT IN THE BUD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Tinn, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-out cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Hericid kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundance.

Hericid is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.

The Limit of Life.

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limitation of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period, that determines its duration, seems to be between 50 & 60: the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to longevity.

DOGS AND PET STOCK

Will be Exhibited by Gold Medal Kennel Club in Newark February 19-23.

According to the present outlook the dog and pet stock show to be given here February 19 to 23, is going to be a most successful affair. The officers of the Gold Medal Kennel Club state that the local entries alone will exceed in number those at the recent Columbus dog show. At the present time there are 190 entries and about 75 of these are local dogs while the remainder represent Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Columbus, Evansville, Mansfield, Co-shooton, Granville and Toboso.

President Knaster and Secretary Lippincott went to Columbus Thursday to arrange for other entries from that city.

The officers have requested the Advocate to announce that all dogs will have separate stalls furnished by the society and that owners will only be required to furnish collar and chain.

Field and Fancy, a weekly sporting magazine published in Chicago, has given the local club very complimentary mention. Other publications of the kind over the country have aided the club materially with flattering announcements of the organization of the club and of the arrangement of the program including prizes and entries.

The State Journal recites the fact that the new senator from New Jersey, Mr. Frank O. Briggs, who was elected on Tuesday, is chairman of the Republican state committee, and expresses the hope that he will resign that position and pay strict attention to his duties as senator. The State Journal would also like to see an exhibition of the same kind of respect and dignity for the high office of United States senator in Ohio. But a man of the calibre and instincts of Senator Dick has very little regard of any ideal standard that would impart stateanship to the high position. The State Journal's conception of senatorial dignity and stateanship is far from being possessed by a many of the type of Charley Dick.

THAW TRIAL

somebody told me there that theaters were no baby farms and if they took me they might get into trouble with the Gerry society. I was finally ushered upstairs and engaged."

Witness said she first met Thaw in 1901. Thaw told her she was too young to go on the stage and wanted to send her brother to school. A long time elapsed before she saw Thaw again, said the witness. Mrs. Thaw then told Harry that White had sent her to school.

"While in school I was taken ill and had to undergo an operation. This was in the early part of 1902. The doctors came and told me I would have to be etherized. I was so sick. Thaw came into the room and kneeling down beside the bed, kissed my hand. He then left the room."

After her recovery arrangements were made with Thaw for her and her mother to go to Europe. Thaw took another steamer.

After the arguments over the admission of the letter from Thaw, which she brought back from Europe with her, Jerome moved that a recess be taken, saying that the witness had undergone a severe ordeal and he wished to extend to her every courtesy.

Recess was taken until 2 o'clock. Hearing and clutched at the wall Evelyn made her way to the ante room with the help of a court officer, where she fainted, but soon revived.

New York, Feb. 7.—Under the direction of the California lawyer, Delphin M. Delmas, the defense of Harry Thaw was once more galvanized into life and the session of court ended with a reversal of conditions of the day before. During the day there was a series of interesting tilts between District Attorney Jerome and Mr. Delmas, and it was agreed that Mr. Jerome had found Thaw's new leading counsel a foe man worthy of his ablest effort.

Evidence was placed before the jury to the effect that Stanford White had been heard to make a threat to kill the defendant—coupling the threat with the display of a revolver; that Thaw's actions following the killing of White were considered by several eye-witnesses to have been "irrational," that an uncle of the defendant was insane; that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw passed a note to her husband during dinner at the Cafe Martin the evening of the tragedy; that District Attorney Jerome has this note and refused on the demand of the defense to introduce it in evidence. The threat against Thaw was made two years and a half before the tragedy. District Attorney Jerome objected to the introduction of the evidence, declaring the defense was not understood by him to be one of self-defense. Mr. Delmas replied that the defense intended to take advantage of every legal defense allowed in the state of New York, be it insanity, self-defense, or any other legitimate justification of the taking of a human life. This was but the first of a series of interesting tilts between the district attorney and Mr. Delmas, and it was agreed that Mr. Jerome had found Thaw's new leading counsel a foe man worthy of his best efforts.

MRS. CHARLES J. HOLMAN.

Benjamin Boman, formerly a stage doorman at the Madison Square theater, was the witness who told of White's threat. Boman declared that on Christmas eve, 1903, Stanford White came to the stage door about 11:15 p. m. and asked for Miss Nesbit. The doorman told him the actress, who was then playing in "The Girl From Dixie," had gone home. White at first accused him of a falsehood, and then asked who had been her escort. "Mr. Thaw," witness said he replied. "Oh, that Pittsburg!" commented the architect, who, to make sure the actress had gone, went to her dressing room. Not finding her there, White, according to Boman, walked rapidly out of the theater with a revolver in his hand and muttering, "I'll find and kill that — before daylight."

Witness Told Thaw. The witness said he believed the threat to be directed against Harry Thaw, and told him of it several days later when they chanced to meet on Fifth avenue. He also told a detective sergeant about the incident. District Attorney Jerome cross-examined the witness for more than an hour, but Boman adhered closely to his story.

"Have you been paid any money by this defendant or his attorneys?" demanded Mr. Jerome. "No," came the emphatic reply. "Have you been promised any?" "No."

Thomas McCaleb, the young Californian who was with Thaw's party the night of the tragedy, was called. It was he who testified that at dinner that evening Mrs. Thaw had suddenly asked her husband for a pencil, scribbled a few words and passed a folded piece of paper to him. What was in this note the witness did not know, and he was not allowed, because of an objection by the district attorney, to testify as to what change of manner, if any, it produced in Thaw. It has been reported from time to time that it was in this note that young Mrs. Thaw, referring to White, wrote to her husband. "That b— is here."

"We understand," said Mr. Delmas, "that this note is now in the possession of the learned district attorney. We want to get at the contents of that slip of paper, believing it to be material evidence. We demand that the learned district attorney produce it."

Mr. Jerome sat silent. He tugged at his short, stubby mustache. Mr. Delmas resumed: "I take it that the silence of the learned district attorney is not intended as a discourtesy, but a conception of what he feels to be his duties in the matter. We will attempt later to prove the contents of the note."

McCaleb detailed, so far as he could, the incidents of the night of the tragedy. He was leaving the roof garden with Mrs. Thaw and thought Harry was following, when the three pistol shots were heard. Mrs. Thaw exclaimed: "My God, he's shot," and then, "Oh, Harry, what have you done, and why did you do it?" Thaw replied, "I have saved your life," and bent and kissed her.

On cross-examination Mr. Jerome went briefly into the past history of the witness. Mr. McCaleb said he knew Thaw some years ago in Paris, and subsequently in California. "Did you ever try to borrow any money from him?" demanded the district attorney. "Never," the witness replied.

Dr. John H. Deemar testified that Henry W. Copley, the defendant's uncle on the maternal side, had been insane. Mr. Jerome had declared that he would not object to the testimony as to insanity in the family provided the proper foundations were laid for it. When, however, Dr. Deemar started to testify as to a cousin of the defendant, Mr. Jerome said he felt he must object again. He declared it should first be shown that Harry Thaw was insane by competent evidence, and it must further be proved that the character of his insanity is hereditary. Then, he declared, and not until then, could the corroborative testimony as to insanity in the collateral branches of the family be placed before the jury. Justice Fitzgerald sustained the district attorney, and Mr. Delmas said he would conduct the case accordingly.

HUGO'S SHORT MEMORY.

Told Different Versions of a Story on Three Occasions.

The Revue Hebdomadaire publishes an anecdote on Victor Hugo which by many will be considered very characteristic. Right after Napoleon III's coup d'etat Victor Hugo and Schoelcher, a well known politician of that period, fed together from Paris. A short time afterward, when Hugo met Schoelcher at his table in Brussels, the poet said: "Yes, my dear friend, you can boast of having once scared me very much. I had no doubt but that we were done for." Turning to the other guests, he explained:

"We were on the way to the Northern railroad depot and were sitting silent and uneasy in the omnibus, our hats drawn deep over our foreheads. Presently a regiment of infantry passed by with flying colors and resounding music. At the sight Schoelcher forgot all caution and, leaning out of the window, shouted, 'Down with Caesar!' Instantly I caught hold of him and closed his mouth with my hand. One word more and we should have been done for."

Two years later Schoelcher visited his friend Hugo in Guernsey. At dinner again the coup d'etat was discussed, and the poet called forth recollections of times past. "Do you still recollect, Schoelcher," he asked, "the day of our flight? We really came off very lucky. But didn't we act like madmen, shouting 'Down with Caesar!' when that regiment was passing by? Of course we were too indignant to be able to keep our temper."

Several years lapsed, and again Schoelcher was a guest in Hugo's house. Conversation turned to civic courage and the like. "Well, my dear Schoelcher," Hugo said to his friend, "I must tell you something I have had in my heart for years. In a critical moment of your life you showed a weakness which grieved me deeply. You will recollect that day when we, after the coup d'etat, left Paris and how I, while a regiment of infantry was passing by, at the sight of these killers of our liberty and in a rage, having no command over myself, shouted out, 'Down with Caesar!' I still have you before my eyes trembling with fear, catching hold of me by the lapel of my coat and forcing me down on the seat, so concerned you were for your precious life."

Baking Day.

Say, baking day's jest lots of fun. Though Liza Ann she gets so mad. And says we're awful, awful bad. And chases us and makes us run— Still baking day's jest lots of fun. For when she has her cake all done And in the oven baking she calls to brother Dick and me, "Come 'long, now, boys; you two rogues can lick the spoon and scrape the pan." And then, see what we do run! Say, baking day's jest lots of fun! —Lippincott's Magazine.

THE STRANGLING FIG.

A Curious Tropical Tree That Lives Upon Other Trees.

Visitors to Mexico and other tropical countries often have their attention called to "the strangling fig"—a tree that commences its growth as an epiphyte—that is, one form of plant life that grows perched on another—far up on the trunk or among the branches of another tree, usually on a palmetto or some of the kinds of palms. The roots of the strangling tree extend downward around the host tree to the ground, gradually joining together, making a tubelike mass of roots sometimes as much as six feet or more in diameter.

When the attacked tree is a palm death to it is caused not so much by the binding around the trunk as by shading out its branches by the attacking tree.

When the attacked tree is an exogen—that is, one with wood and bark—the attacking roots bind so tightly as to cause a stoppage of the flow of the sap. As the sap of a tree is really its food (changed by the leaves so that it can be used) and the flow of the food is thus stopped, the attacked tree is really "starved" to death. So death to the attacked tree is caused either by smothering or by starvation or by both.

The peculiar manner in which the flattened roots extend down and around the tree give them the appearance of some thick, slow flowing material running down the tree.—St. Nicholas.

GRIM OLD CROMWELL.

The Protector Made Christmas a Gloomy and Serious Day.

"Christmas was illegal in Cromwell's time," said an antiquary. "Those grim old Puritans were so gloomy that they would not have any gaiety even on Christmas day."

"Cromwell said that holy and mistletoe were heathenish things. He said that they had no real Christian significance; they were a part of some pagan festival of the Druids. Accordingly he made a law that if you decorated your house with mistletoe at Christmas you got thirty days in jail."

The terrible old fellow forbade Christmas celebrations—no dancing, no singing, no playgoing, no feasting on Christmas day; penalty, thirty days.

"You see, it was his idea that Christmas was a religious, a serious time, a time for churchgoing and prayer and reverence and for nothing else. The innocent family that in Cromwell's day sat down to turkey and plum pudding and wound up with Christmas games got a mouth all round."

"Only for a time, though. The people rebelled. Willing as the people had been to put on the gloom of those dreadful old Puritans, they insisted on having a little joy on Christmas day, and Cromwell after a year or two had to give in to them."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"The Woman in White."

In a letter to Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins intimated the fact that the great work upon which he had devoted so much time was finished, but that the finding of a suitable title had occasioned him much trouble. Eventually, feeling somewhat run down in health, he left London for Broadstairs, a resort which was a favorite with both Dickens and Collins. While lying on the cliff in a meditative mood one bright morning his eyes suddenly riveted themselves on the white light-house which stood boldly out in the foreground under the dazzling rays of the midday sun. As he gazed Collins in a semiconscious manner addressed himself in a whisper to the light-house. "You are as stiff and as stately as my white woman," said he. "White woman! White woman—the woman in white. Eureka! I have got it!" And so the book was given this curiously inspired title.

The French Idea.

The Frenchman of the middle class sacrifices everything in order to obtain for his children some official position or other, a mean one, perhaps, but a sure one, leading after thirty years of penury to a pension verging on destitution. This is one aspect of the decay of the French race. It is easy to understand that two races are not evenly armed for the struggle for life if one be made up of aspirants to official position and the other of individuals possessing initiative, daring and energy. For this reason do Latin races decline, while Anglo-Saxon races grow and multiply.—Paris Siecle.

Bow and Arrow Fishing.

In the south seas and in various groups of islands in the Indian ocean the aborigines shoot fish with the bow and arrow. The art is extremely difficult, as in taking aim at an object under water the archer has to allow for refraction. If he were to aim directly at the fish as he sees it, he would, of course, miss. Long practice has, however, made the natives expert to a wonderful degree in this sport.—London Saturday Review.

The Rise of William Bentley

(Original.)

William Bentley, having an enormous appetite, was driven to exercise or death. He reluctantly chose exercise.

No one ever thought of calling him Mr. Bentley or even William. He was universally known as Billy Bentley. When Billy announced his intention to take exercise every one laughed. A great many kinds of exercise were offered to him, most of them for the purpose of geying him. One day the dominie said to him:

"Billy, if you wish to take exercise and don't care to benefit yourself by it except in health, why not do something to benefit others?"

"How?" asked Billy.

"At the bureau of united charities we need men to saw wood. Wood sawing is the best remedy a dyspeptic can take. Go up there every day and give your services to the poor, and perhaps the Lord will return them to you multiplied."

Billy took the hint. Arrayed in a frock coat, a white waistcoat and a silk hat, he went to the bureau and sawed wood from 3 till 5. Then he went home, took a bath and ate a dinner that required another two hours' work to digest. He felt so much better that he kept up the wood sawing with great regularity.

One day soon after Billy commenced to saw there was a meeting of the lady directors of the bureau in the building overlooking the woodyard. Billy was engaged in digesting his yesterday's dinner.

"Who's that out in the yard sawing wood?" asked Miss Arabella Stevens, a wealthy young lady much interested in charitable work. "He doesn't look like a pauper."

The manager was called in and questioned. She reported that the gentleman's name was Bentley and that he sawed wood, she supposed, from an interest in the poor.

Now, the ladies present had husbands or brothers or sons, but none of them had ever seen or heard of a man who loved the poor so well as to saw wood for them. It was hard enough to get the men to give money, and when a man hadn't that to give he gave nothing.

"Isn't it perfectly lovely?" said Miss Stevens.

"Such true charity!" remarked the president.

"Reminds one of the sacrifice of the widow who gave her mite!" observed the secretary.

"I wonder who he is anyway?" asked a director.

"He's aristocratic looking even while doing a work so far beneath a gentleman," put in another director.

"He ennobles the work," added a third.

When after a month had rolled round and the board met again at the same place and hour, there was Billy bending over a saw buck getting himself in shape to gorge himself again at dinner. The board was thrown into a flutter of admiration compared with which the original discovery of the friend of the poor was as nothing. How could this charitable wonder be utilized in the world of philanthropy? It was like finding a diamond in the mud. Billy was sent for to appear before the board and, without being given an opportunity to give a true account of himself, was obliged to listen to adulation that astonished him. Then he blushed and said that sawing wood was excellent exercise.

"Did you ever see such modesty?" whispered the secretary to the treasurer.

"Not your right hand know what your left hand doeth? I have ever met with," replied the treasurer.

Then the president asked Billy if he would accept the position of superintendent of all the charities under the direction of the bureau. Billy was too astounded to reply. Then the president told him that his charitable nature was only equalled by his modesty and he should have a week to consider the matter.

Before the end of the week Billy received an invitation to dine with Miss Stevens and ate so enormous a dinner that the lady remarked:

"Poor man! He works so hard for others it's no wonder he needs to eat heartily."

Every man needs opportunity, and Billy Bentley had found his. Whether he would have grasped it had it not been for the interest Miss Stevens took in him is another matter. Certain it is that Billy, seeing a possibility of possessing her and her fortune, concentrated his faculties on his work. Naturally he turned to labor saving. Now, some managers will work very hard and accomplish very little. Others will work very little and accomplish a great deal.

Billy was one of the latter kind. Though he sat at his desk sharpening his pencil, he managed the United Charities remarkably well. But this was merely a starter. Mr. Bentley developed an administrative talent that was truly surprising. One of his old acquaintances called it "a genius for finding ways of doing nothing where there was much to be done without inconvenience or other evil result." Bentley was offered one position after another, each a step higher than the last, until he became president of a mammoth trust.

Of course Mr. Bentley married Miss Stevens, and this was one of the secondary causes of his remarkable rise in the world. But, on the other hand, his fortune is now so great that beside it his wife's is insignificant.

FATHER CHARGED WITH SERIOUS CRIME BY 7-YEAR OLD DAUGHTER

James Clemings a Blacksmith Living Near Dry Creek Was Arrested Wednesday Night—His Wife an Eye Witness To Outrage—Was Fined for Assault.

James Clemings, a blacksmith, 32 years of age, was arrested last night by a squad of patrolmen at his home near Dry Creek about four miles north of the city on the Mt. Vernon road. He was lodged in the county jail on a charge of assault and battery on his wife, she being the complaining witness.

This charge was but a blind for a more serious charge which was placed against him when he was arrested before Mayor McCleery in police court Thursday morning. The second affidavit charged him with abusing his seven year old daughter at their home, north of the city, on Tuesday.

Both charges were read to the man Thursday morning. He pleaded guilty to the assault on his wife and was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to the county jail for 90 days. When the second charge was read to him he entered an emphatic denial of its guilt and formally pleaded not guilty. He asked for an attorney, saying that he wanted some advice before making any statement at all. The case was set for hearing on Friday morning.

Wednesday morning, Mrs. Emma Clemings, wife of the defendant came to the office of Mayor McCleery and told a most revolting story of her husband's abuse of their little daughter. She also stated that her husband had assaulted her when she made the discovery of his unfatherly action.

In explaining the details of the case the mother stated that she questioned her daughter concerning the deed and learned that this was not the first time that the father had attempted her outrage.

The warrant charging assault and battery was made out and placed in the hands of Chief Sheridan Wednesday evening. An arrangement was made whereby Mrs. Clemings was to notify the police department when her husband was at home.

A call came from that district Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and Chief Sheridan called in Officers James Callan and Doc Brooks and together with Driver Francis and Wagonman Swank were driven to the man's home in the patrol wagon.

Clemings made no effort to resist, apparently knowing that it was useless. He was brought to Newark and placed in the county jail. The officers in charge of the arrest were

She asked the police to assist her in getting the money.

She went to the hotel operated by Gus Kern, on Second street, where she was arrested about midnight by the officers. In police court she was fined $25 and costs, and sentenced to 30 days in jail, but the sentence was suspended on condition that she leave town. This she agreed to do.

TAILOR COSTUME IN BLUE CHECK CLOTH

The accompanying drawing shows a good design for a street suit for early spring or the late winter season. The model was of dark blue light-weight cloth, over the surface of which indistinct green lines formed a vague check. The coat was cut in hip length, and was trimmed with stitched bands of cloth in plain dark blue. The jacket was plaited on each side of the front and in the back. The cloth bands on each side of the front were drawn through slits in the revers. The three-quarter length sleeve was trimmed with stitched bands of the cloth and cloth-covered buttons. The skirt was made with four tucked panels, the lower part being trimmed with shaped bands of cloth. This design would also be excellent for mohair or velvet trimmed with bands of silk.

Nothing Like a "Star" Plug

The man who drives a wagon or the man who rides an automobile finds there's nothing like a chew of "Star" to satisfy tobacco hunger. On nearly every automobile ride "Star" is part of the outfit. Those who make their pleasure in this way demand the best and only the high quality of

STAR

is good enough for them. No other chew is so wholesome, so clean, so rich, because no other chew is made of such choice tobacco leaf.

No chew is so economical as "Star" because its full-bodied leaf is elastic and lasting. A 10c. piece of "Star" will "out-chew" 10c. worth of any other kind sold—and give far greater satisfaction in the bargain.

"Star" plugs are full 16 oz. weight and honest value. "Star" sales equal those of any five other brands.

MAY BE PREMIER PITCHER IN O-P

WRITER THINKS LINKE IS ONE OF THE "COMERS" OF NEXT SEASON.

Gygli and Humphreys, Sign at Lancaster—O. P. League Dope for Newark Fans.

Information came to Columbus last night, says the State Journal, to the effect that Newark's fans wanted to hold a song service yesterday morning when they were informed that the Columbus club had asked for waivers on Pitches Fred Linke and Joe Stoupe.

While it is not settled that either box man will return to the team for which he did good work last season, the people of the Licking county metropolis seem to be taking much for granted anyhow and have the "glad hand" ready for the return of the pair.

If no club owner in the A. A. decides that he wants to see what Linke and Stoupe can do, it is very likely that the pitchers themselves would be glad to return to Newark for another year at least.

It's a fact that no other club in the O. P. league can do business for them, for magnates of that organization are working under a rule that drafted players, if they return, must revert to their original club.

It is claimed by O. P. leaguers that their players are as well, if not better paid, than those of the Central, which ranks a class higher than the organization in which Newark holds membership.

It wasn't so many months ago that Fred Linke was an unknown quantity as a pitcher. The old pitcher trotted him out again, the Senator a year ago last April, and he found for Pittsburg's club that season.

At its close he did business with the Columbus club and of late it was instrumental in getting him a berth with Newark for next year. He did so well that he is figured to be the premier southpaw of the O. P. league, if he spends the next season in it.

Two Lancaster "Vets" Sign. Manager James Breen of the Lancaster ball club has received the contracts of Gygli and Humphreys for next season. Both are infielders who were with the club last year.

If Lee Fohl does not make good with Columbus it is rumored that he will be turned over to Lancaster, but according to the new rule he must revert to Youngstown if the Senators can't use him. He was drafted from Youngstown.

Catcher Moore, whom Manager Billy Smith signed up, must have a bug for getting positions. Secretary Farrell discovered that he had accepted terms from New Castle, Dayton and San Francisco. He was awarded to the California club.

Youngstown fans are beginning to get anxious about that ball park that is to be. The Vindicator says, "Only six weeks till spring and no ball park yet."

Reds' Southern Trip. Cincinnati, O., Feb. 7.—The Cincinnati National league baseball players will leave for Macon Springs, Tex., for the spring training, in two parties. The batteries, with Captain and First Baseman Ganzell and Business Manager Bancroft, leave for the south on March 5, and the rest of the team will leave on March 10. President Herrmann will himself go south later on.

Good Riddance to Rheumatism

Health is Happiness! Pain is Misery!!

There is no pain more distressing than that of Rheumatism. Rheumatism is a disease of the blood. The presence of acid in the blood means that the blood is full of uric acid. Nature's way of getting rid of it is by perspiration and in her efforts to cast it from the body, it goes into the joints—on some—anywhere. The dull, aching pain and the sharp twinges in arm and leg are the beginning of the disease. Permanent disability and unendurable tortures are the penalty of the sufferer who allows the disease to go unheeded. By dissolving and removing from the system the uric acid, Athlo-phos quickly relieves the pain and restores the swelling joints helping nature to restore the shattered system to its normal condition of health and activity. Every druggist in this town sells and recommends it. Ask your druggist for

ASHVILLE HIGH WALLOPED N. H. S.

CARRIED LOCAL BASKET BALL LADS OFF THEIR FEET EARLY IN THE GAME.

Visitors Were Too Heavy For Newark Boys and Played Rough Game—Many Fouls Called.

The Newark High school lads were carried off their feet in the basket ball game last night at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium when the Ashville High school team lined up against them. The final score was 52 to 18 and the game was pronounced the roughest seen on the Y. M. C. A. floor this season. The referee's whistle was sounding almost constantly after the first half opened, and the second period of play was no better as far as the roughness goes.

If the Newark team had been strong on throwing baskets from fouls, winning would have been an easy matter, because there were so many fouls made by Ashville. Their tactics were very rough and the game resembled a football game more than it did basket ball.

Every Ashville man was heavier than his opponent and most of them were enough taller that it was possible for them to get the ball on a pass before the Newark men could reach it.

For Ashville Stoker was easily the star, throwing ten baskets from fouls besides throwing four field goals. Swoyer and Noggle were also fast, scoring eight and six baskets respectively.

F. Lewis was successful in scoring six points, while Black scored seven.

A good crowd was out to see the game, and though little opportunity was given for the rooters to jollify, they were enthusiastic.

The line up and summary: Newark—18 Ashville—52.

F. Lewis..... 18 Ashville..... 52

Miss Fannie McWannec, Lake Geneva, Wis., writes of HAIR HEALTH: "My hair had been gray ever since I was sixteen years old. It started to get gray first on the crown of my head, was dry and fell off dandruff, and my scalp itched dreadfully. I used HAIR HEALTH and in a few days my hair was now soft and glossy, and very few gray hairs left. I do not think I could get along without HAIR HEALTH now, for it is such a fine hair dressing."

SEVERAL YOUTHS IN NEW CASTLE

RECENTLY RELEASED BY JUDGE THERE, WHICH AROUSES POLICE CHIEF.

The Latter However, Had Previously Turned Loose Several Sons of Prominent Citizens

It will be remembered that some weeks ago several young men, sons of prominent citizens of New Castle, Pa., were arrested for burglary, and it is said, admitted their guilt to Chief Spiers, but that officer turned them loose. Recently several boys whose parents were not "prominent citizens," were tried before Judge Porter in that city, and that jurist suspended sentences on them, at which action Chief Spiers took umbrage.

The New Castle News evidently does not think that the chief has any cause to inveigh against any miscarriage of justice, and says:

"Chief of Police Spiers is 'sore' over the act of Judge Porter in suspending sentence on the eight youthful and self admitted burglars who appeared in court and entered pleas of guilty to recent burglaries on the East Side and in the Seventh ward. Spiers thought that some penalty should be imposed by the court in view of the time and trouble spent by the police department in working up the cases.

"Such criticism is possibly what was expected by Judge Porter when he remarked from the bench on the day the boys appeared before him that some persons would possibly criticize his act, but that it was up to the boys to show by their conduct in the future that such was unwarranted.

"Chief Spiers has made no comment on the occasion when sons of several 'prominent residents' of the North Hill were arrested and admitted their guilt to burglary to him, and were then promptly turned loose."

Flowerpots.

All new flowerpots require to be soaked in water and allowed to dry thoroughly before being used. The soil does not hang well to the sides of garden pots unless so treated. Dirty pots are open to the same objection. Let any one try to put a plant with fresh soil into a pot which has been used before and left unwashed, and he will find in a few days, when the soil begins to dry, that it leaves a space and does not adhere as it should to the sides of it. No plant can possibly flourish under such circumstances. The roots of a plant draw to the sides of a pot naturally in search of moisture, and growth of course is checked if a current of air is allowed to pass between them and the sides. Some plants exhibit this tendency in such a remarkable degree that few roots are to be seen, except a network on the outside of the soil next the pot.

Fish, Flesh, Herring.

"Neither fish nor flesh nor good red herring" occurs in Dryden's epilogue to his Duke of Guise (182). The epilogue takes the form of a dialogue between the actress who spoke it and a trimmer and ends with this exclamation:

They're neither fish nor flesh nor good red herring.

PATTI'S BURNING ADMIRER.

The London Express says: Many stories of Mme. Patti are still going the rounds. Once in Italy a card was brought to her from a man whose name she did not know, but who was so very anxious to see her that she allowed him to be shown into her room. When the unknown came in he proved to be a little old man who was quite red and speechless with nervousness. Suddenly Patti noticed smoke coming out of his coat, so, without a word, she seized a glass of water and threw it over him. It turned out that the old man had put his lighted cigar into his pocket when he entered the room, and so had set fire to his coat. "Sir," said Mme. Patti, "I have had many admirers who professed themselves burning with admiration for me, but I have never before met one who went so far as to set himself on fire to prove it."

MRS. CORA B. MILLER MAKES A FORTUNE

Started a Few Years Ago With No Capital and Now Employs Nearly One Hundred Clerks and Stenographers.

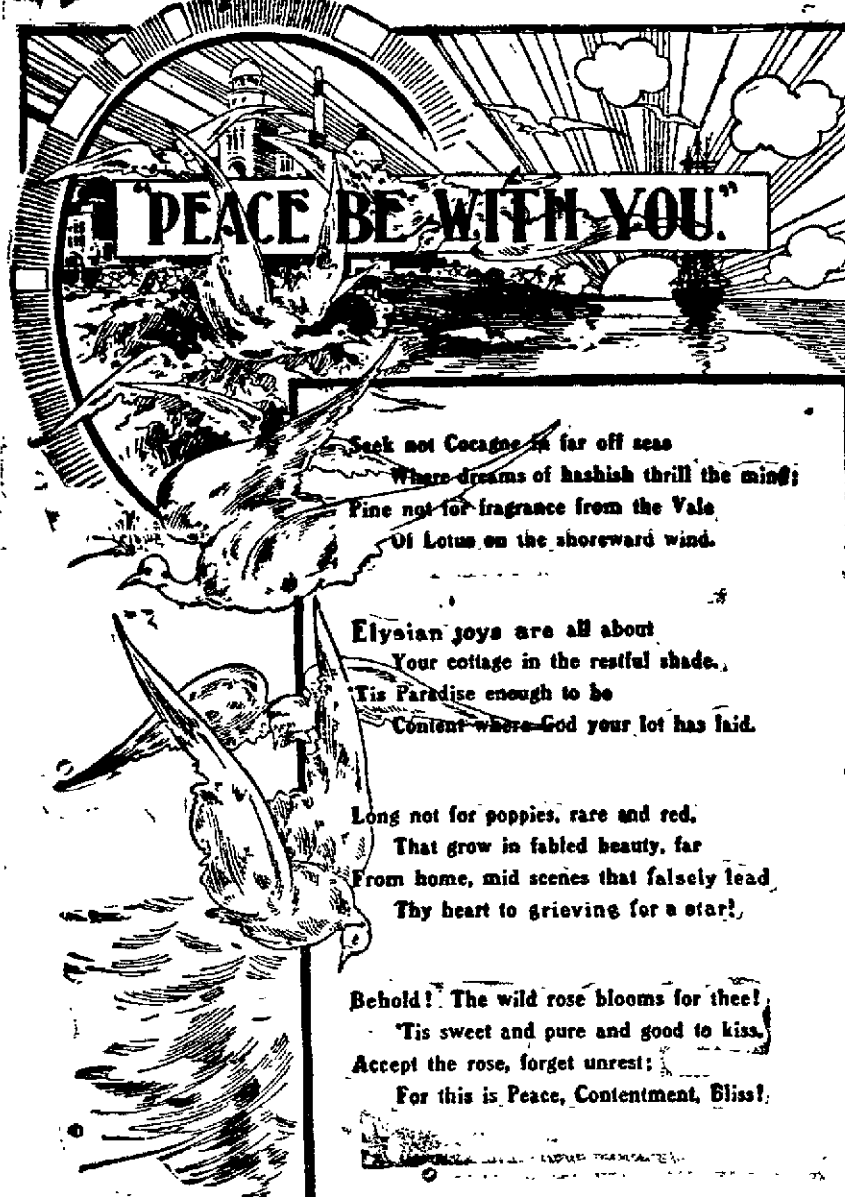

Until a few years ago Mrs. Cora B. Miller lived in a manner similar to that of thousands of other very poor women of the average small town and village. She now resides in her own palatial home, a residence, and is considered one of the most successful business women in the United States.

Mrs. Miller's New Residence, Earned in Less Than One Year.

Several years ago Mrs. Miller learned of a mild and simple preparation that cured her and several friends of female weakness and piles. She was besieged by so many women needing treatment that she decided to turn it to those who might call for it. She started with only a few dollars' capital, and the remedy, possessing true and wonderful merit, producing many cures, was sold and simple preparation that cured her and several friends of female weakness and piles. The Paradise enough to be Content where God your lot has laid.

Paralysis

cannot be cured, but it CAN be prevented. And all who are threatened should quickly safeguard themselves against this hopeless half-death. Are YOU threatened? In the blood is a certain impurity, known as uric acid. This impurity is frequently deposited in the walls of the blood vessels until the arteries become brittle like chalk. When the blood pressure becomes high, these hardened arteries break, and the blood rushes out over the brain. This blood clots, and by pressure, destroys the action of the brain cells covered by the clot. This results in paralysis. Flethy, short, thick-necked people are most liable, because their blood usually contains more uric acid. You must get rid of that uric acid. You must wash every unnatural trace out of your system. Theagent Nature has provided for this very purpose is LIFE PLANT. LIFE PLANT goes all through your system and dissolves every trace of uric acid sand, leaving the body not only free from disease and in perfect running order—but free from the very danger of death itself.

No matter what the nature of your complaint is, write your symptoms fully to Dr. I. J. Mizer, President of the Life Plant Co., Canton, O. and receive his personal advice free. Every household should have our helpful book—GOOD HEALTH—mailed free to you on request.

Were Advocates of a Fourteen-Foot Channel for the Mississippi.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The advocates of a 14-foot channel for the Mississippi river from Chicago to St. Louis and the gulf met defeat when the house, in committee of the whole, having under consideration the river and harbor appropriation bill, voted to stand by the recommendation of the committee in opposition to the project. Although there was much speechmaking on the part of the friends of the measure, they secured only 43 votes for the amendment as against 145 against it.

Stage Director Tells How Father John's Medicine Cured Him of the After-Effects of Pneumonia.

Speaking of the risks taken by business and professional men, Oscar Eagle, stage director for Liebler & Co.'s productions, says: "After an acute attack of typhoid pneumonia, I got up out of a sick bed to attend to an important matter. I had a racking cough, such as it is impossible to describe. My business associates expected me to die. Three of the best physicians obtainable could do nothing for me. I lost 20 pounds in eleven days and was never so completely run down in my life. That I recovered is regarded by my friends as a miracle. I was about to go to a hospital when Father John's Medicine was recommended to me. After continuous failing under the treatment of doctors, I had little faith left, but began taking your medicine. I continued to take the medicine, and after six bottles was restored to sound health, gained the flesh I had lost, and have ever since been as well as ever in my life. Since then I have talked with my physician and learned that he prescribed Father John's Medicine in such cases. He agreed with me that it has wonderful merit."

MAGOON DECREE ROUSES CUBANS

People Generally Opposed to Plan for Large Standing Army.

COMMITTEE SEES GOVERNOR

Latter Explains Order Not Yet Operative, Awaiting Confirmation From Washington — Reasonable Time Promised to Study the Project. Modifications May Be Suggested.

Havana, Feb. 7.—The Cuban people generally are manifesting opposition to the project to increase the armed forces of the republic, as set forth in the decree issued by Governor Magoon. The Moderates, at first disposed to approve the project, now oppose it. They believe the plan involves compulsory military service. This conception evidently is based upon a misunderstanding of the plain terms of the decree, which merely declares the liability of all able-bodied citizens for military service in emergencies in the same manner that the constitution of the United States refers to military service.

A committee of prominent Liberals called on Governor Magoon and set forth their unwillingness to approve the project without a careful study of terms of the decree, and intimated that they might desire to suggest modifications. It is believed that the Liberals will protest against the imposition upon Cuba of the cost of maintaining a standing army great in proportion to the population of the island.

Governor Magoon explained to this committee that the decree was not yet operative, that it was awaiting confirmation from Washington, and that he would present to Washington their request for delay so they might have a reasonable time to study the project.

GOLDWIN SMITH'S POSITION CRITICISED

By Rev. Father B. M. O'Boylan, Who Suggests the Proper Attitude of U. S. Toward Foreigners.

(By Rev. B. M. O'Boylan.)

Goldwin Smith suggests that citizens of this country should have their children trained in military tactics, so as to be able to crush the foreigners who are coming among us in case of riot, etc.

How much better would it not be to train those foreigners to be patriotic citizens who would take up arms to defend their adopted country? Among the foreigners we have as good people as any our native element can boast of. We have strong, brave, heroic men whose chief glory in their past history is that they saved Europe and Christian civilization from the rule of Mohammed and whose modern history is a record of undying resistance to tyranny and despotism.

I am surprised that a gentleman of Goldwin Smith's standing should lend his pen so often to the exploiting of silly sentimentalism. He certainly knows that our manufacturing centers could not get along without those strong laborers who have come in such numbers to our shores within the last twenty-five years. If he has any cause to complain he should be logical enough to distinguish between the various classes of which he so recklessly writes. The American press, just at present, does not justify such a course as Mr. Smith suggests, and were he a true friend of this republic, instead of making those of whom he so contemptuously writes, our foes, he would endeavor to make them our friends.

It is not very comfortable for us to read in papers of the same date as Mr. Smith has written, how in case of war with Japan, Mr. Smith's beloved motherland will be bound by her treaty with that country to fight against us. This reminds me of Gladstone's Maynooth speech, in which, speaking of the growth of the United States, he said that notwithstanding this, England had never given up the hope of again retrieving her New England colonies or at least of being the arbiter of the United States.

Would we, in case of such a conflict, be able to defend ourselves against England and Japan, especially if we had turned Goldwin Smith's advice into practice?

We have now some millions of Hungarians, Slavs, Poles, Bohemians, Italians, Roumanians, Croats—in a word of the great Hungarian-Slavic-Celtic family of which history testifies that no more brave or warlike people ever took up arms against a foe. In the face of the abject fear exhibited by certain journalists of the present time I believe the proper spirit to rouse in the breasts of our school boys is a strong, martial and patriotic spirit that will not go for disunion, but for love and deathless loyalty to our common country, which should be in truth as well as in sentiment, "The land of the free and the home of the brave."

Furthermore, I do not see by what peculiar right Mr. Smith claims to be any less a foreigner in this country than those he so freely dubs with that offensive epithet. The fact that a man cannot write or speak English is no obstacle to his carrying arms in defense of our flag. It was not the case when many of these foreigners' ancestors fought against Mr. Smith's countrymen during the revolution, and in the event of the threatened strife, it is not likely to be a bar to their entry to our army and navy. Perhaps Mr. Smith is only playing the part of an advance agent and that the wish to cause internal strife is father to his written thought. Be that as it may I think the proper role for us to play is to encourage union and patriotism among all we have among us, and give Japan and every other country to understand that America is not afraid, and will not take any impudence from Japan or any other country. Instead of training one side, let us train all classes in the use of arms, but that only in the cause of our country; and let not this sickly, effeminate talk we hear about The Hague or any other peace conference cause us to sink into cowardly inaction.

"The life of man is a warfare in earth," as Job put it, and we must fight to the end, either against spiritual or corporeal enemies, and, in spite of all that may be said to the contrary, that peace which comes from war is the purest and best of all. Peace won from our conquered passions; peace won from our unjust aggressors; peace with honor, but peace always, with love of country in the foreground.

TO ROOSEVELT IN THE BROWNSVILLE AFFAIR.

Declares Foraker is Addicted to Fighting Administration and Other Republicans.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Former Governor Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland and Major C. B. Wilcox of Sandusky who was the Burton-Daugherty candidate for state chairman in the fight against Senator Foraker and Dick last fall, arrived in Washington yesterday. Their mere appearance here started the fire under the Ohio political pot, and last night the pot boiled merrily.

Grapevine reports had it that the coming of Messrs. Herrick and Wilcox had a direct bearing on the Taft presidential boom. They denied that their visit was of a political significance, if not made primarily for purposes of politics. Most important of these developments was an interview given The State Journal correspondent by Governor Herrick. The former governor criticized Senator Foraker severely, declaring that it is his custom to oppose any Republican administration that stands in the way of his own ambitions.

"In the first place," said Governor Herrick, when he was pressed to talk politics, "I want it understood that I did not come down here on a political mission." Governor Herrick did talk politics, however, when he was asked the question that is put to all Ohioans who come to Washington these days, "What do the people of Ohio think of Senator Foraker's fight in the Brownsville affair, and what effect it is going to have politically?"

"Senator Foraker's attitude in this affair is not much of a surprise to us in Ohio," replied Governor Herrick, with a quizzical smile. "We don't regard it so much as evidence of his love for the colored man, but rather as his availing himself of an opportunity to oppose a Republican administration. You know of the man, who is always 'agin the government.' Well, Senator Foraker may not be 'agin the government,' but he has maintained an unbroken record of being 'agin a Republican administration,' whether state or national. This opposition seems to be temperamental and constitutional in his case. Therefore, we take it less seriously, perhaps, than any other people are inclined to take it."

"As we recall history in Ohio, Senator Foraker has been opposed to every prominent Republican who seemed to be in his way or whom he conceived to be inimical to his interests. For instance, among those he has opposed we can recall Sherman, McKinley, Hanna, Nash, Herrick—I refer to myself as governor—Taft, Burton and Dick, until Dick's surrender. As for national administrations, he opposed Harrison and McKinley, while the country is thoroughly informed as to his attitude toward the Roosevelt administration.

"In fact, as I now recall it, the senator has been out of sympathy with Republican administrations, both state and national, for the last 12 years. As I said before, if it were not for those facts, we might take his championship of the colored brother as against President Roosevelt more seriously."

JAPS "SWELLED UP" SINCE VICTORY

Ex-Consul Bragg Says That a More
Insinuating Class of People is Hard to Find.

Fond Du Lac, Wis., Feb. 7.—General Edward S. Bragg, former United States consul general to Hongkong, China, in an interview said there was no danger of war between the United States and Japan. "A more insinuating, swell-headed class of people than the Japanese are at present would be hard to find," said the general. "This is due largely to their recent victory over the Russians. Since the Japanese-Russian war, I have heard many things about a threatened break with the United States. While this break may come in time, the danger is not imminent. The Japanese have a heavy war debt to pay off, and although it is probable that they could put a large army in the field, they have no visible resources to draw from."

The train, which was made up of seven buffet, dining and parlor cars, makes two stops in this city, one at West Philadelphia and the other at North Philadelphia. Shortly after the train left West Philadelphia the fireman, Harry Michner, noticed the speed of the train was unusual. Michner called to Toms but received no answer, and when the train rushed through Fairmount park and cleared North Philadelphia the fireman climbed over the big boiler into the engineer's cab to find Toms dead with his hand on the throttle. His head was hanging out of the cab window, and had been crushed by striking some object along the road.

NEGRO SOLDIERS TELL THE STORY

Of the Shooting Up of Brownsville, Tex., Before the Senate Investigating Committee.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Former Sergeant Jacob D. Fraser, colored, of Company D, Twenty-fifth infantry, was a witness before the senate committee on military affairs, which is probing the Brownsville riot. Fraser testified that he is married, and with other married soldiers was permitted to live outside the post quarters. He said he was at home with his family when the firing in Brownsville occurred and was awakened by two shots. On his way to the quarters he heard the general fusillade, which appeared to be near B and D company quarters. He described the call to arms and the rollcall by Captain Lyons, and said every man was present or accounted for. He said he withheld no information, and declared there was no conspiracy of silence. On cross-examination Fraser stated himself "shot up" the town to drive the colored soldiers away. Charles Dade, a cook, and Terry Reeves, a former sergeant, both testified they knew nothing about the riot or the "conspiracy of silence." The latter said he did not believe any of the soldiers were implicated in the fray.
